Marine Surveyor Scores Hit With Seafaring Tales

La Mesa Club To Put On Program, Next Kiwanis Meet

Speaking on the subject, "Ships and the Men Who Go Down to the Sea in Ships,' Kenneth Walker of Point Loma, marine surveyor, regaled Kiwanians of Ocean Beach with highly interesting tales of the sea at this week's club meeting, held Tuesday evening. Walker spoke from 39 years of seafaring experience, having ran away from home to go to sea in 1906 when he was only 12 years old, he said. Harry Masters, club secretary, was program chairman for the evening.

Of particular interest were his tales of the now outlawed practice of "shanghaing" recruits for the sailing ships making the long journey to and fro around Cape Horn from the Pacific to the Atlantic coasts. In this racket, which he termed one of the worst ever practiced in this country the victims really were kidnapped after giving them knockout drops in their liquor with result that they did not wake up until they were about three days out to sea. The racket was finally outlawed in 1915 when teeth were put into the law against such practice, he said.

Speaking of his present work, he said that his job is to go out on the high seas to survey and salvage wrecked vessels and establish the "corpus delicti" on ships reported sunk, purpose being to obtain the data required by marine underwriters to fix the insurance recovery value. In determining such values, we set up what we call the "average damage," he said.

One of his missions of salvage he reported was to go to Guatamela to float off sand bars a German ship that the Germans had given up trying to salvage after repeated attempts at floating by channeling the sand. He floated the ship by channeling the sand with sheet steel and use of cement, he related.

Chairman I. J. Claspill of the Education committee had Rollin E. Reed conduct a brief quiz on Kiwanis education as a feature of the session preceding the main program.

Guests at the meeting were Bob Fuller of the La Mesa club and Fred Edwards of Ocean Beach, the latter a guest of Dan Moss.

President Jerry Sullivan announced that the La Mesa Kiwanis club will put on the program for next week's meeting and will attend in force. To accomodate the visitors, the hour for next week's meeting will be 7 o'clock instead of the usual 6:30.

New Materials For Postwar Homes To Be Discussed Here

New materials that will be available for postwar homes, types of roofs, and various grades of home building materials and their uses will be the subject for the regular meeting of the Home Planners' Institute to be held Monday evening, April 30 in the Ocean Beach Elementary school, reports Frank Lockett, Institute chairman.

Featured speaker will be Geo. V. Johnson, representing the San Diego building material dealers. He will illustrate various types of furnishings designed for special types of homes, draperies, floor coverings, and show comparisons of modern to period furniture.

Other free Home Planners' Institute lectures are now being presented in various other parts of the county. A program, identical to the one presented at the Ocean Beach school, will be presented Tuesday evening at the La Jolla high school.

Bethany Lutheran Church To Observe Birthday Sunday

(By Rev. Martin Lankow)

Bethany Lutheran church of Ocean Beach will celebrate its annual "Birthday" on Sunday, April 29. "Tried, But True" will be the 10:45 a. m. sermon theme of Pastor Lankow.

The Rev. William J. Lankow, who preached the morning dedicatory sermon at the Kunz Memorial chapel April 26, 1936, also will participate in the service. This Sunday likewise recalls the organization of the congregation which took place April 25, 1937. The first congregational resolution included: "Resolved: that we keep as our goal the purpose of soon opening a Christian Day School." Bethany Lutheran School, now filled to capacity, was dedicated on Sept. 14, 1941. On Dec. 3, 1944 Bethany dedicated its parsonage. "The Lord has been gracious. Let us remember at the time of our dedication we numbered three lady members, and when our school opened we started with only five students." W. Timm is in charge.

At 3:30 Sunday afternoon the annual re-union roll call will take place. At this service, after an adult Baptism, this nome coming service will feature the calling of the roll of over three dozen who have been confirmed or baptized as adults at Bethany. The response will be given with the Confirmation Bible text of each individual present. Nine of those on the roll call are serving in the armed forces.

Sunday Schoo, opening at 9:30 in Bethany School, is under the leadership of Merle Porter. The adult Bible class will be taught by the Rev. W. J. Lankow. Bethany Lutheran church and School is located at Sunset Cliffs Blvd., and Cape May Ave., with study school and parsonage in the church group.

City Appeals For Cleaners Of Beach

In response to a letter sent by Secretary Harry Masters of the Chamber of Commerce to City Manager Fred A. Rhodes, asking that the beaches in front of Ocean Beach be cleaned, the latter replied that he "simply did not have the men necessary to do the work. Mission Beach and La Jolla need beach cleaning as bad as Ocean Beach. Not a thing has been done because of the manpower shortage."

So anyone interested in working for the city, under contract, can get the employment at once, according to Rhodes. "If anyone will offer to contract for the work on a just basis, we will be glad to accept bids, just as we have been doing for more than two years with contractors on rubbish collection," he said.

Lownes and Marc Strauss Named to Head Loan Drive

Legion Post Admits Two New Members On April 19

Clyde A. Wright post of the American Legion at the April meeting, held on April 19, elected Joe R. Lownes and Marc Strauss to head the part that the local Legion post will take in the Seventh War Loan campaign. The campaign will open on May 14 and close on June 30. Request for support of the drive came from the state headquarters of the American Legion, Commander Earl Shaw reports.

Capt. Earl Yost of the U. S. Marine Corps and M. A. Macklin were initiated into membership and the latter was named as delegate to attend the Legion district meeting at Chula Vista on April 22.

Capt. Yost was selected as publicity chairman for the post for the current year.

Post Service Officer Ralph Chadwick reported on the efforts being made to assist discharged veterans of this war. Few as yet have appealed to the post for the free information that is available to them. Commenting on the situation this week, Commander Shaw stated that it is surprising how few of the servicemen apparently know about their rights and benefits, even in the matter of the tax exemptions that are available to them under California law. This exemption is in effect this year for the first time. All veterans seeking information are asked to see Commander Shaw, or phone Ralph Chadwick, Bayview 6961, and those wishing the tax exemptions are urged to go to the office of County Assessor Crowell Eddy on the first floor of the Civic center, and there make application for exemption.

At the Legion meeting to be held May 17, a carton of cigarets is to be offered as a door prize, announces Commander Shaw.

Nine Officials Of County Given Salary Advances

Judge Wilson Rules That Boosts In Salaries O. K.

Nine officials of San Diego will be given advances in salary retroactive back to Feb. 1 as result of a superior court opinion handed down last week by Judge Emmett H. Wilson of Los Angeles. Copy of the opinion was received by the county supervisors Friday. Judge Wilson had presided in a hearing of a suit to test legality of a court action in which three taxpayers sought an injunction to restrain the county from paying the increased salaries.

The plaintiffs claimed the boosts could not be granted under a provision of the county charter forbidding salary advances for officials "during the term of office for which they were elected." Officials whose salaries were affected were named defendants in the test action.

Counsel for the county auditor, treasurer and supervisors had contended the increases were legal under an amendment to the state constitution suspending the ban on salary raises for incumbents during their term of office, and that the county charter does not apply. Judge Wilson upheld that contention, declaring "the constitution is the paramount authority," and that "the charter provision is eneffectual and purposeless."

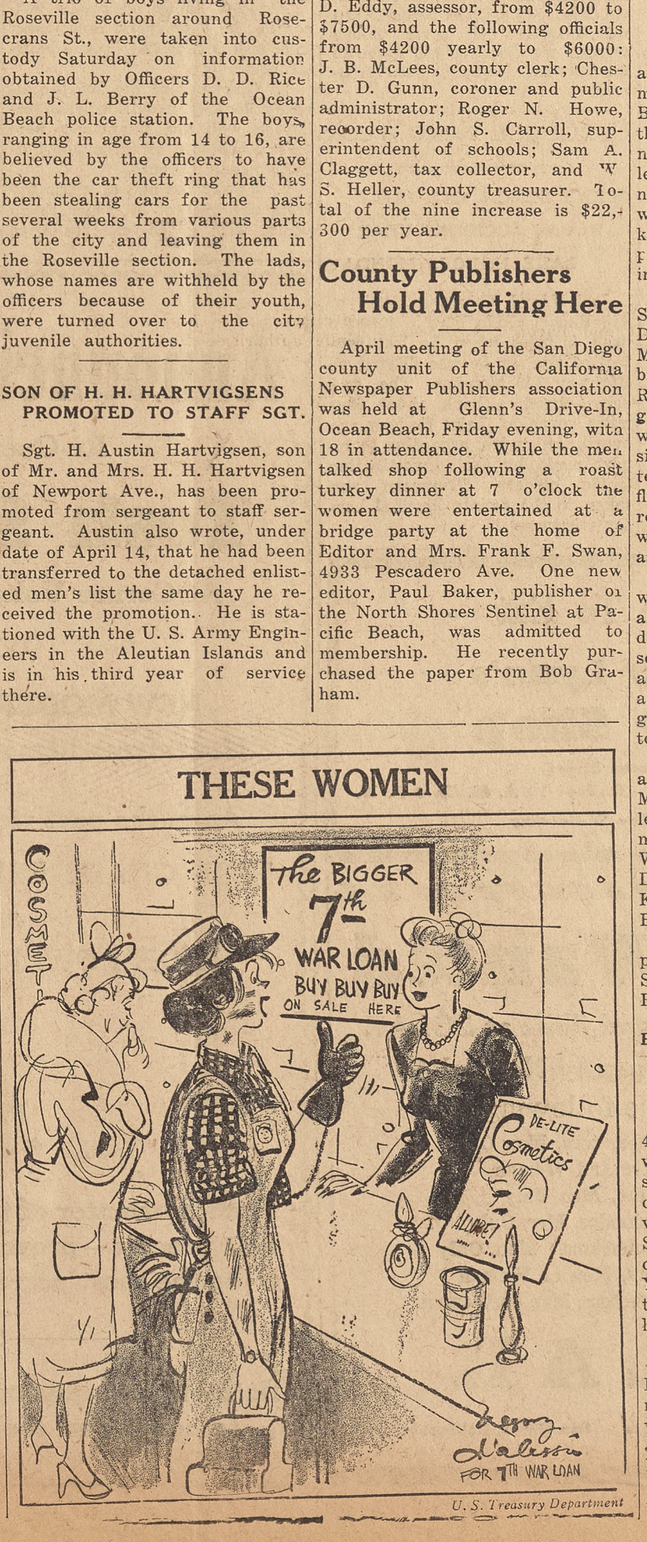

The nine officials benefiitted by the decision, their present annual salaries and the new rates of pay follow:

Thomas Whelan, district attorney and county counsel, increased from $5400 annually to $10,000; Bert Strand, sheriff, from $5400 to $9000; Crowell D. Eddy, assessor, from $4200 to $7500, and the following officials from $4200 yearly to $6000: J. B. McLees, county clerk; Chester D. Gunn, coroner and public administrator; Roger N. Howe, recorder; John S. Carroll, superintendent of schools; Sam A. Claggett, tax collector, and W. S. Heller, county treasurer. Total of the nine increase is $22,300 per year.

Intensive Drive For Used Clothing Set For Saturday

Ocean Beach Scouts And Kiwanis To Aid Drive

Saturday of this week has been set aside as the day for an intensive house-to-house drive to round up all the used clothing Ocean Beach families plan to donate to the Overseas War Relief campaign which ends this month. They are urged to have their donations of clothing ready when the Boy Scouts call.

Today in Europe alone 125 million men, women and children are in desperate need of the forgotten usable clothes that hang in the closets or repose in the attics of American homes, according to National Chairman Henry J. Kaiser.

The plan for Saturday, as previously announced by Ocean Beach Chairman Tom Plant, is for the Boy Scouts to make a house-to-house canvass for the items to be donated. The items particularly asked for are: Men's, women's, childrens' and infants wear, and shoes, overcoats, topcoats, suits, dresses, shirts, skirts, jackets, pants, work clothes, gloves, underwear, sleeping garments, robes, sweaters, shawls, and all knit goods, also blankets and bedclothes.

Chirman Plant and Martin Murphy have lined up 120 Boy Scouts to work all day Saturday on this worthy enterprise. Headquarters for Saturday's effort have been established at the Log Cabin near the Methodist church on Sunset Cliffs Blvd. and Saratoga Ave. The Scouts will meet there early in the forenoon to get their assignments of blocks to cover.

At the Kiwanis meeting Tuesday a number of the men volunteered their services for Saturday to help the Scouts, but more men are sorely needed, announced President Jerry Sullivan.

All Ocean Beach men who can help either with trucks or cars or without such motor vehicles are asked to report to the Log Cabin, also boys other than Boy Scouts who would like to help with the canvass are urged to report to the Log Cabin headquarters early as possible on Saturday.

Numerous business houses around Ocean Beach also have the barrels or other containers into which the donated clothing can be placed, announced Chairman Plant.

Three Carloads Sent

Three carloads of old clothes, shoes and bedding already have been sent to the UNRA, and soon will be enroute to "help clothe the impoverished and destitute people in the liberated nations," reports General Chairman E. B. Gott. Shipments also will go to the Philippine Islands, to China and to other of the far east allies, he said.

Meanwhile, the tempo in the collection increased, as more truckloads of clothes, shoes, etc., were unloaded at the campaign's warehouse at 1002 West Juniper street where "volunteer help is sorely needed" according to Gott.

"What we really need are strong armed men, who will help us complete the loading of our first freight carload of clothing, bound to help the poverty-stricken and destitute people of the liberated nations," he added. Those willing to help are urged to call Mrs. Mary Fay at W-1740 as soon as possible.

Plans Under Way For Minstrel Show

Plans are going forward for an Ocean Beach home talent minstrel show to be held in the near future at Wallace Hall, corner of Sunset Cliffs and Brighton, Mrs. Meta Bruce, the director of the production, announced this week.

"In order to make it a successful event, however, she says "we need more talent. Surely there is plenty of talent in Ocean Beach. If you can sing, dance, play an instrument or anything else either group or solo that you think would add to the show please step right up and volunteer your services.

"There will be tryouts starting on Wednesday, May the 2nd at 7 p. m. at Wallace Hall. Don't hesitate, tell your friends and help us make this a big event," declares Mrs. Bruce.

GOD IS MY CO-PILOT

By COL. ROBERT L. SCOTT

WNU Features.

CHAPTER IX: Burma is falling into the hands of the Japs. Flying over bombed and burned Chinese towns they land at Schwebo. Scott meets General Stilwell and his party.

CHAPTER X: Scott's group carries refugees out of Burma, heavily overloading the planes. He pays a visit to Gen. Chennault and tells him he is a fighter pilot and not a ferry pilot and is promised the next P-40 that arrives from Africa.

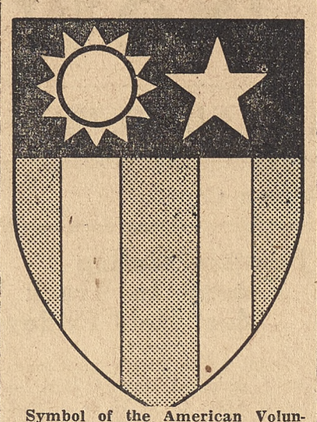

CHAPTER XI: Open season on Japs—the big adventure is near. Scott gets his first Jap—an army number on the ground. He burns up some Jap trucks and a fuel dump.

Rather tired from ten hours' flying that day, all combat, I went back home excited but somewhat on the thoughtful side. It had taken me about two weeks of flying this ship to realize what a weapon it really was. I had just seen it cut a Japanese battalion to bits, had seen the firepower of one American airplane leave three or four hundred dead and dying enemy soldiers in the mud of the Burma Road. As I listened to the roar of that Allison engine and patted the gun-sight affectionately, "Old Exterminator" was more than ever a character to me—it was an institution. I knew right then that this ship was almost a human being.

As the May days drifted into weeks, I made up little schemes to fool the Japs. Perhaps the schemes worked, perhaps they didn't—anyway they eased the disappointment of not getting letters from my wife and little girl and from the other folks back home.

I'd make my two, three, or four mission flights a day with the fighter. But I'd go early in the morning with the spinner on the "shark's" nose painted white, and I'd attack Lashio or Mogaung from the South. Later in the morning I'd strike from the West, with the spinner painted blue. After lunch the eager painters or my drafted crewmen would have the spinner another color for my flight. By the time I made the fourth sortie, with the spinner a fourth color and my approach from a fourth direction, I'm sure the Japs didn't know where I came from—and most certainly they didn't guess that the American fighter force in Assam was composed of one single Kittyhawk. If they had, they would have been forced to do something to "save face." For at the moment, with me drunk with the wine of my first combat, the Jap was losing face.

During this month I went to China as much as possible to talk to members of the AVG. Some of these pilots I had taught to fly in the Army Schools back home. I had checked quite a few of them and I was older, but I'm glad I realized then that these younger pilots knew a million times more about combat than I did. I'd corner some of these Flying Tigers and ask them questions, for I longed for the day when I'd get to fly on attacking missions with them.

Symbol of the American Volunteer Group "Flying Tigers" which made aerial combat history over China and Burma when the Japs were having their inning. The AVG was later inducted into the Army Air Corps, with General Claire Chennault as commander.

At first they were hard to know. The men they had met as representing our Army in China had been pretty harsh with these high-strung flyers, who after all had done the greatest job in the war against the enemy. In the beginning they were reluctant to answer my questions or tell me the secrets of their success in combat. They couldn't understand why a Colonel in the Army Air Corps had to know anything. As George Paxton put it: Didn't the Army know everything? "Seems like to me," he said, "every army officer we've seen out here knows all the answers."

When he found out that I was serious, and that my ambition was to get over there and fly with them, and learn combat from them, so that in the end I might teach it to our younger pilots who would be coming out, he told me things that I would never have learned otherwise.

"First," he said, leading me off under the wing of one of the P-40's, "first, the Old Man says, never turn with one of the Zeros. He says that's bad."

I learned that the Jap ship would outmaneuver anything and would outclimb the P-40 four to one. "But that doesn't matter," Paxton said. "The P-40 is the strongest ship in the world. It's heavy as hell, but that makes it out-dive just about anything, and it'll out-dive the Jap two to one. With those two Fifties and the four thirty-caliber guns in the B's we have done pretty good. Now with the six Fifties in the new Kittyhawks we out-gun anything."

He told me that Hill, Rector, Bond, Neal, Lawler, and other aces had seen Zeros disintegrate in front of their six Fifties, and went on to advise that I use the good qualities of the P-40's against the bad qualities of the Jap, but never try to beat him at his own game—climbing and maneuverability.

Paxton did me a lot of good—he got me my first flight with the AVG on the Emperor's birthday. But the Jap didn't come in. We were the most griped bunch you've ever seen. Everyone up and waiting at three a. m.—and then the dirty so-and-so's didn't have the guts to come in!

I heard a story on George Paxton that will show you the kind of tough Texan he was. It was down over Rangoon, near Mingaladon airdrome, in the early days of the Burma war. Doctor Gentry, who told me the story, said that the squadron George was in was aloft and engaging the Japanese over the field. Looking upstairs, you could see the condensation streamers criss-crossing the sky, and every now and then a trail of smoke as a Jap Zero burned and plunged towards the earth.

Finally eight or nine Zeros ganged up on George Paxton. They got on his tail and they got all over him. He fought his way partially out of the trap, but two of them right on his tail literally shot him to pieces. George's ship was seen to trail smoke and dive straight down, from about fifteen thousand feet. Doctor Gentry said they watched the stricken Forty and knew who it was by the number. As it disappeared behind the trees they mentally crossed the boy Paxton off their list of living men.

But George and the sturdy P-40 were not through. There was the surging scream of an Allison engine's last boost, and the ship skimmed over the trees and made a belly landing on the soft part of the field. Even then, considering the number of Japs who had been using George for target practice and the way the ship looked, with big holes in the tail, wings, and fuselage, as they drove out for him in the jeep they expected to find just a body.

Instead, they found George Paxton standing by the side of his ship, swearing and shaking his fist at the sky.

Doctor Gentry said he looked into the cockpit. The instrument panel was just about shot away, the rudder pedals were partly shot to pieces, the armor of the pilot's seat was badly bent—but Paxton was out there yelling:

"I still say those little snakes can't shoot!"

Even his Texas boots were practically shot off. Two doctors picked rivets from George's back all the afternoon, and Jap explosive particles from his feet, legs and hands. The worst injuries had been caused by the Japanese explosive bullets hitting the seat armor and driving the rivets through into George's back. But for the armor, those explosives would have been in Paxton's back, instead of just the rivets.

On May 17, I flew with the AVG on a mission from Kunming into Indo-China. Squadron Leader Bishop led the attack. I flew the wing position with R. T. Smith, one of the aces of the Flying Tigers and one of the pilots I remembered checking during his training days at Santa Maria, California.

We got off the Kunming field with our fighters and headed South over the lakes at twelve thousand feet. In a few minutes we passed Mengtze and the clouds thinned out and the weather got pretty clear. We went just about over Laokay, on the Chinese-Indo-China border. Then we followed the River Rouge through the very crooked gorge in the mountains, on South towards Hanoi.

Association Warns Property Tax Rate Could Jump 43c

San Diego county's postwar tax rate could go up 43 cents per $100 of value, based on this year's valuation, if the legislature does not shelve the five kinds of proposals before it to further liberalize California's aid to the aged, California Taxpayers' association said today, analyzing the effect on local taxes of typical plans now before the legislature.

The annual cost of old age assistance to the local county property taxpayers could go up from the approximately $390,000 of county cost for this fiscal year to about $1,686,000 in postwar years, the association said. State and federal costs in the county could also go up from the present $3,544,000 a year to about $11,153,000 a year.

The five kinds of costly proposals, the Taxpayers' association said, unless defeated by the legislature would:

1. Take out of the law the already lenient provision that relatives who are financially able must contribute to the support of their needy parents.

2. Lower the age of eligibility from the present 65 years to 60 years, with a ten-year residence requirement for needy persons in the 60 to 65 age group.

3. Increase the present "highest in the nation" aid of $50 per month to $60.

4. Further liberalize the law with respect to allowable earnings and income.

5. Provide for $100 county contribution to burial costs.

"If all these proposals were passed by the legislature, California's present aid to the needy aged, which totals $91,000,000 this fiscal year, could go to $297,000,000 in the postwar years. The $9,000,000 share now being paid by the property taxpayers could go to $39,000,000. The state's present $45,000,000 share could go to $182,000,000. The cost to the federal government, currently $37,000,000, could go to $76,000,000.

"California is already the most generous state in the union in the care of needy aged people," the Taxpayers' organization declared. "Action by the legislature in January in fixing the aid at $50 a month keeps California at the head of the list in maximum payments per person. Further liberalization should be refused by the legislature."

OCEAN BEACH ELEMENTARY HOLDS OPEN HOUSE

A variety of school activities was provided for the visitors at the "Open House" at the Elementary school April 25th. A "spell-down" was held in Room 19, members of the sixth grade participating. Merrilyn Williams won first and Patricia Hudson second.

In room 18, other sixth grade students gave a current events program on state, national and international events. Twenty children of room 9, fourth grade, participated in an arithmetic class.

An exhibit of art work, examples of work in water colors, calsomime, colored chalk, crayons and finger painting, was on display in the auditorium. During evening visiting hours, a group of children, several from each grade level, entertained visitors by working at easels with various art media.

Visiting hours were from 7 to 8:30, and 350 visitors registered in the auditorium.

Special programs were held in certain rooms. The mothers of the children in Miss Knudson's sixth grade room, were guests at a special arithmetic lesson, after which the mothers were guests at a patriotic tea served by the sixth grade girls.

Mrs. Sikes entertained the mothers of first grade children at a tea on Tuesday. The first grade pupils also had an art exhibit of their room work the same day.

He also sent them the medal and along with it some German souvenirs. He said little about the details in the letter they reecived from him except to say that he was already out of the hospital and was in Paris. They have an idea from what he wrote that he was wounded in one arm in some action with the infantry on the Western front in Germany. He had been overseas for 17 months and was with the Yanks on "D" day when they first landed in Normandy last year. Pete came from Chicago to Ocean Beach about 3½ years ago and was employed for about a year in the Ocean Beach hardware store.

200 Veterans Of World War II Get Weekly Payments

Sacramento, Calif., April 11—More than 2,000 Veterans of World War II are receiving weekly payments under Title V of the Servicemen's Readjustment Act through the California Department of Employment, it was announced today by James G. Bryant, chairman of the California Employment Stabilization commission. During the first six months of the program for the payment of unemployment allowances to veterans 28,695 checks were paid totaling $568,720, and each veteran drew approximately 6¼ checks for an average weekly payment of $19.35, Bryant said.

Payments to self-employed veterans by the Veterans Administration are of limited volume, Bryant said, with only 80 veterans filing during the first four months of the program. Occupations of veterans seeking allowances while self-employed included farm operators, attorneys, photographers, accountants, authors, insurance and real estate brokers, miners, and other business operators.

Bryant pointed out that allowance payments are enabling veterans to become settled in profitable employment or self-employment and serve to bridge the gap between military service and civilian pursuits.

The Nation's Strength

I know three things must always be
To keep a nation strong and free.
One is a hearthstone bright and dear,
With busy, happy loved ones near.
One is a ready heart and hand
To love, and serve, and keep the land.
One is a worn and beaten way
To where the people go to pray.
So long as these are kept alive
Nation and people will survive
God, keep them always, everywhere,
The hearth, the flag, the place of prayer.

Railroad Noises

An editorial from the San Jose, California, "Evening News". [San Jose is on the main line of Southern Pacific's Coast Line]

WE HAVE always resented those snooty expressions, "across the tracks" or "down by the tracks," with their implication that there was something disreputable and socially low-life about living near railroad tracks. After living many years a block from the Espee's rails, we rise to say that there are many worse places to live.

Living close to the railroad has its obvious advantages when you are a boy. Where is there a more romantic place than the right of way, with wheezing switch engines, puffing freights (which travel so much faster now than they used to) and speeding passenger trains? Morning, noon and night railroading holds attraction for a boy, which is why so many of them go into it, finding a romance which never dulls until they die.

"But how can you stand the noise?" someone asks.

Far from being bothered by the noises, you get so you find them soothing and conducive to repose. You get so you can tell the freight trains from the passengers, and you distinguish the touch on the whistle rope of that individualistic engineman who makes his blasts so short, sharp and distinctive.

The various whistle notes represent to you these giant creatures of fire and steel talking to one another over long distances and on winter nights, when the wind is blowing and the rain is pelting against the windows it is pleasant to think of engineer and fireman, snug in their cab with the fire roaring below them, shunting lines of cars up and down the glistening wet tracks.

If these night noises from the tracks are comfortable and appealing to you during peace they have even more of these qualities during war. You realize that both the wars in which we are engaged are transportation wars and must be won not only in the foxholes and workshops but on the railroads as well. Some of the particularly long trains you hear puffing and snorting these nights are troop trains and others are weighed down with war's materiel. It is comfortable to reflect what a great job the railroadmen are doing, driving their trains and switching their cars 24 hours a day, even while you are asleep.

Back a few years, when trucks and buses started to cut more and more deeply into railroad revenues, with the airplane as an additional competitor just ahead, as a boy living near the tracks you may have wondered a little worriedly if they would put your old friends, the freights and passengers, out of business. It took the war to show that a nation's need of railroads continues, that no nation can be great and strong without them. You are reassured by that, and by the articles and drawings that have been published of vastly improved equipment which will help the railroads get their share of traffic after the war. Such things mean your friends will be able to stay alive and that, drowsily safe and comfortable, you will continue to hear the trains chugging and puffing through the night.

* * * *

We thank the San Jose News for so beautifully putting into words the way we railroaders, and many other people, feel about trains. 176B

THE NATIONS ASSEMBLE—

This week the representatives of the nations have assembled in San Francisco. Assembled with them are the hopes of humanity for a lasting peace.

It is hardly possible that a formula for a permanent peaceful world can be worked out at this one conference. It is possible, however, that in view of the progress already made at Teheran, Dumbarton Oaks, Yalta and Chapultepec, further progress in this direction can be realized.

Actually, the diplomats, cannot "build" the peace as one might build a house or a church. They can only seek to establish the proper political and economic "climate" in which the desire for peace—which has already grown up in the hearts of men—may be brought to fruition.

No matter how successful the conference may be, its results are not likely to completely satisfy every nation. Concessions must be made by all. No one nation—great or small—can expect all others to conform to its views.

Let us pray that wisdom, justice, patience and understanding will guide all delegates in their deliberations.

ERNIE PYLE—

American journalism never took a harder blow that it did when the news came from the far Pacific that Ernie Pyle, the most beloved of all war correspondents, had been killed.

His passing will be mourned by G. I.'s wherever they may be, for Ernie Pyle was the man who shared their hardships, understood their problems and told their story. It was he who inaugurated the move for extra pay for the men who serve on the firing line.

Ernie saw the war not as a glamouous game in which military strategists seek to outmaneuver each other. He saw the personal side of the conflict—the scared kids going into battle, the wounded men being taken to the rear, the monotony and weariness that is so often the soldier's lot.

His unpretentious manner, his simple way of writing, his appreciation of the little things in life—all these endeared him to the thousands who knew him and to the millions who read his writings.

He wrote of "Brave Men." Though he made no pretentions of bravery, he was one of them.

PRESIDENTIAL SUCCESSORS—

The passing of President Roosevelt which elevated Harry S. Truman to the highest office in America, also moved Secretary of State Stettinius up to next in line for the office should this post become vacant again before the end of this term.

No vice-president will be named to succeed Mr. Truman. Senator McKellar of Tennessee will take his place as head of the Senate.

As far as presidential successors are concerned the law provides for eight of them, including the vice president. They are the Secretary of State, Secretary of the Treasury (Morgenthau), Secretary of War (Stimson), Attorney General (Biddle), Postmaster General (Walker), Secretary of the Navy (Forrestal), and Secretary of the Interior (Ickes).

SEVENTH WAR LOAN DRIVE—

Although the Seventh War Loan drive does not begin officially until May 14, it is already under way for individual bond buyers since their purchases made since April 9 will count in the final total. The campaign will run to the end of June.

California's quota is $861 million. Of particular interest is the fact that more than half of that amount—$538 million—is to be sold to individuals. And that puts Mr. and Mrs. John Q. Citizen squarely in the spotlight. They have the major role in this campaign. It is their individual bond purchases that are being especially sought.

In fact, the Treasury department has ruled that no community can receive credit for exceeding its over-all goal unless the individual quota has been attained.

The national goal is $14 billion and $7 billion of this is to come from individual pocketbooks. This means that more real "drive" will have to be put into this drive than ever before if we are to make it the success that it must be. Banks of the nation, which have played a principal part in the sale of War bonds both during and between drive, are organizing their sales forces even more intensively for this one.

To add further incentive to their efforts, they will compete among themselves to see which of them can sell the most bonds to the public.

The emphasis on individual bond purchases is aimed at absorbing as much as possible of the excess purchasing power now creating a dangerous inflationary threat. Every bond, then, is doubly important. It will help both on the fighting line and the home front.

All who have type "O" blood please go to the Blood Donor center at 446 W. Beech St., and donate your blood which is badly needed now and will be until the enemy is crushed. All whose blood that is used for plasma also go as nothing else is more necessary to save lives. Call F-7704 and make an appointment.

We have a ward of sick WAVES in the hospital and each week would like to send some dainty to them such as jellies, a box of candy or a good book. This week the center donated six spoons, six cups and saucers and two sandwich plates so they can have an afternoon snack when our boys have their cakes and cookies.

We have here at the center, 4769 Del Monte Ave., grease and sugar which you can purchase without stamps or points if you bake cakes or cookies which are sent to the hospital each week. We allow four hours for each cake or dozen cup cakes and a half hour for each dozen cookies. When you have 50 hours you receive a pin from Camp and Hospital, showing you serve Red Cross. Won't more of you ladies please help in this project? It means so much to our sick and wounded.

Ocean Beach women always have met each war need and I am sure you will meet this one but you forget how many wounded are arriving each day.

We can never do enough to repay these men for what they have given to keep this world free.

MAX MILLER GRANTS AN INTERVIEW TO OCEAN BEACH NEWS REPORTER

In an informal interview this week your reporter talked for an hour with Lt. Comdr. Max Miller, personal friend of the late Ernie Pyle, columnist and G. I. reporter supreme. Because of the widespread interest in the recent loss of the beloved war correspondent and the books of our neighbor, Max Miller of La Jolla, we are passing the highlights of this interview on to readers of this column. We talked of his books, 14 in all, starting with "The Beginning of a Mortal," story of his boyhood days in Montana; of "Harbor of the Sun," San Diego's own story, and his last published book, "The Far Shore," just off te press, a story of the grim, incredible, business of invasion, on European shores on D-day.

"Why are you so interested in the sea?" he was asked, "Because I was born so far away from it I guess," answered this restless, roving, man of the sea. As we talked, he stood, pacing back and forth, with his eyes forever gazing out over the ocean. He is a wealth of walking, vivid, interesting information garnered from the four corners of the earth. He has just returned from duty in the South Pacific. Born in Montana, he attended school in Everett, Wash., and University of Washington, joined the fleet in World war I, and returned again to University of Washington, then to Australia as a journalist, then on assignment to Solomon Islands, where on a jungle Isle he caught a native spear in the thigh and returned to the United States to recuperate. It was then that he "Covered The Waterfront," for the San Diego Sun. Always close to the Navy he has watched the growth of naval flying and plane manufacture from its infancy. He was commissioned in the Navy in 1942.

After publication of his first book, Mr. Miller devoted all of his time to book writing, traveling to Mexico, China and Alaska. Since "Harbor of The Sun," San Diego has regarded the author as a prized personal possession.

During our talk the charming Mrs. Miller, (Margaret Miller, editor of the book page in the San Diego Union) who is an author in her own right, joined us. Her book "Along Our Coast", is an interesting story of sea creatures of the Pacific ocean, profusely illustrated with actual photos.

Speaking of the recent sad death of Ernie Pyle the Millers were visibly moved, almost to the point of tears, "It was a terrible thing and we'll miss him greatly," said Mrs. Miller. The brawny officer cleared his throat and said. "I worked with Ernie on Tinian and Saipan and numerous other Isles and knew him from his many visits to San Diego and loved him as a personal friend and associate. It was on one of his visits to this city that he wrote a descriptive story of our home, and it was in this story that he said 'The ocean is their front yard.' ".

Mr. Miller conducted me through the rooms of the home of which Ernie wrote, and I can well understand why he was moved to write of this remarkable home. The floors are all waxed Spanish tile, scattered with hand-braided rugs made by Mrs. Miller, and Navajos, many fireplaces, low chairs, and all of the things which make for comfortable, informal living. Max Miller's studio is on the second floor with a balcony which is almost out over the ocean. It seemed to be a studio for combined work and rest, for while a huge capable looking desk and typewriter looked very businesslike, there also were comfortable low chairs with spotted seal skins thrown over them (brought back from Alaska), a divan in front of a window with an ocean view, a fireplace, and we noticed a pair of hand-carved gaucho stirrups from South America, on the mantle. The walls were lined with shelves of books, one reserved for the authors own, 14 in all. He has been asked to do another one for the Navy, which he plans to start immediately. The proceeds from all of his books are turned over to Navy relief. Above the desk is an autographed photo of Al Pearce (of Al Pearce and his gang), and Mrs. Pearce. On the wall hangs a framed piece of ordinary brown wrapping paper, which once served as a covering for an etching, done for him by Gene Ahern, the cartoonist, in the upper left-hand corner is a drawing of the little bearded fellow associated with "The Squirrel-cage" cartoons, and the address is also distinctive.

Regarding Ernie Pyle, I asked "Why do you suppose he had such an aversion to speaking in public?" "Because he was afraid of it, and so am I," said Miller. "A good writer is never a good talker, and I could never understand why they often refer to a person as a famous author and lecturer, because the two do not go together."

We stood on the balcony outside the studio, overlooking the blue Pacific and as I felt the bigness of that vast body of water, so also did I realize the greatness of Lieut. Comdr. Max Miller, U.S.N.R., personal friend of the late Ernie Pyle.

Viola Hensel Weds Herman Riese At Church Ceremony

On April 22 the wedding anniversary day of Mr. and Mrs. O. E. Hensel, their daughter, Viola was married to Herman W. Riese, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Riese, of 4554 Niagara Ave. The wedding took place at 3 p. m. at Bethany Lutheran church, with Rev. Martin Lankow officiating. The bride and groom chose the 23rd Psalm as the text for their sermon, followed by the same song, sung by Clara Tuevsky. After the double ring wedding ceremony Clara sang the Lord's Prayer. Mrs. W. Riese played organ music before and during the ceremony. The bride's father gave her in marriage.

The altar was banked with fern, Watsonia, snap-dragons, sweet peas, calla lilies and Chinese lilacs.

The bride wore a brown suit and large white picture hat and a shoulder bouquet of white gladioli and stephanotis. The matron of honor was the bride's mother who wore a beige suit with brown accessories and a corsage of talisman roses.

Mrs. Jack Larson, bridesmaid, a sister of the groom, wore a gold suit with brown accessories and a talisman rose corsage. Harry Zuehlsdorf, brother-in-law of the groom, was best man, and Ray Lange and Walter Timm were ushers. Mrs. Fred Riese, the groom's mother, wore a silk print dress with a red rose corsage.

A reception at the bride's home, 1611 Sunset Cliffs Blvd., followed the ceremony, with 75 guests present.

Out-of-town guests included the groom's aunt Elsa Creighton and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Kobe and Gary all of Los Angeles, Lieut. Comdr. and Mrs. Baker and Nancy of Blue Earth, Minn., and Yeo. 1c Eunice Fransen of Spokane, Wash.

The couple spent a few days up in the mountains, after which they will be at home in Ocean Beach.

EIGHTY YEARS YOUNG

The records say that on this day
I've reached the age four score!
I've had my share of toil and care—
Some times I think much more;
But, even so, I've had, I know,
Great blessings and great joys;
Two daughters who are kind and true
Five splendid sons, my boys!
A home, 'tho humble, yet our own;
Good health and friends I prize;
A faith in God, a priceless boon
In which true comfort lies.
So, John and I, still hand in hand
Pursue our onward way.
God grant we reach the Heavenly land
At some not distant day.
We're wedded now near 60 years
With ups and downs, of course
We've had our share of joy and tears
But not, so far, divorce!
We are a bit old fashioned, too
And not quite in the style!
But day by day, keep on our way
To finish out our mile!

Minnie H. Clarke, 4761 Niagara Ave.
Ocean Beach, April 23, 1945—

Mrs. Clarke celebrated her 80th birthday on Thursday, April 19, though her birthday is April 23.

Guests at the meeting included Mrs. A. E. Crom of Pacific Beach, Mrs. Wilmer Breeden of San Diego and Mrs. Esterbrook, the latter a guest of Mrs. C. R. Bartlett.

Christian Science Text 'Probation After Death'

"Probation after Death" will be the subject of the Sunday Lesson-Sermon in all branches of The Mother Church, The First Church of Christ, Scientist, in Boston. The Golden Text is from the Psalms: "The Lord will perfect that which concerneth me: thy mercy, O Lord, endureth for ever."

Luke's Gospel relates that while two disciples journeyed to Emmaus, shortly after the crucifixion, "Jesus himself drew near, and went with them. . . . And . . . one of them, . . . said unto him, Art thou only a stranger in Jerusalem, and hast not known the things which are come to pass there in these days? . . . Concerning Jesus of Nazareth, . . . how the chief priests and our rulers . . . have crucified him. . . . And . . . as he sat at meat with them, he took bread, and blessed it, and brake, and gave to them. And their eyes were opened, and they knew him; and he vanished out of their sight."

Mary Baker Eddy writes in "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures:" "In the walk to Emmaus, Jesus was known to his friends by the words, which made their hearts burn within them, and by the breaking of bread. The divine Spirit, which identified Jesus thus centuries ago, has spoken through the inspired Word and will speak through it in every age and clime."
